F: Calendar Description: (Not to be included in Calendar)

This course is an adjunct to MODL 192 when the latter is offered as part of the Bilingual Language and Cultural Institute. The intent is to support the further development of linguistic and cultural fluency by providing a variety of experiences for language use and cultural exchange outside the confines of the formal language classroom. It consists of a series of informal, activity-based, language practice opportunities which may include drama, music, sports, language games and related activities both on and off campus. These activities will also include native speakers of Mandarin as participants, thus providing an authentic linguistic and cultural milieu for both Canadian and Chinese students to practice new language and cross-cultural communications skills in a mutually beneficial and cooperative environment.
